Skeet Enthusiasts To Sharpen Talent On New Club Field

There is now a sport at Yale which is not affiliated with the Athletic Association. Two Sophomores, N. R. Boice and H. P. Ingels Jr., have organized a Skeet Club of twenty-two members, which has materialized after the work of these two enthusiasts in building a field last year.

After obtaining a piece of land behind the practice fairway on the Yale Golf Course last fall, Boice bought three shacks for the range and laid down the necessary cement. He and Ingels are now waiting till the cold weather allows the entrance of trucks, so that they can level the field and spread cinders. The field was christened officially last May 1 and witnessed shoots with Army, Princeton, and the New Haven Gun Club.

Boice Elected President

Organized on October 15 this fall, the Skeet Club elected Boice as its president, Ingels as secretary, and Bob Lyman, 1943, as treasurer. The club is managed by the students, who arrange their own meets and are at present angling with Princeton to form an intercollegiate league, which has formerly been managed by the Remington Arms Company.

"Prospects for the year look pretty good," said the captain of the team.

with Lyman, Ingels, Boice, Lyons, Rosien, and Taliaferro all shooting around 90 at least.

Boice asks that any student in college interested in joining the Skeet Club see him. The dues are $5.00 for the year, and the members shoot any time enough of them want to go out to the field. The club can provide shells for 12, 16, and 20-gauge shot-guns.
